Common Sense Reasoning

Hood's Sarsaparilla Had Cured Others, and It Cured Me.

"It was sixteen years ago my right leg began to swell and pain. Four years ago it broke out in three dreadful sores. I tried all kinds of salves and liniments but the sores became worse."

I had to walk on crutches and a greater part of the time was confined to my bed. I could not sleep nights and my eyes became affected. I have worn glasses for over six years. Since I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills two of the worst sores on my limb have healed and the third is almost closed. My sore eyes have been benefited as I can see to read and write and also attend my duties for service. I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla by noticing advertisements. I reasoned that what has cured others would cure me and it has proved so. It is a splendid medicine. Mrs. KASIA WESTBROOK, Manning, Mich.

SCENES IN NAPLES.

Some of the Incidents of the Street Life in the Neapolitan.

The commonest people of Naples eat from anything from the stores or shops, but patronize peddlers and street hawkers almost exclusively. At the port side of the city a bill of fare is offered to the hungry wayfarer that is laughably reasonable in price and varied in kind. Besides the ever present macaroni the principal articles of food are the frusti di pane, "sea fruits," in cluding mussels, polipi and sea spiders, all regarded as most tempting delicacies by the ever hungry Neapolitan.

Then there are roasted fishes of all kinds, maize dumplings, so called spighe, and finally the national meat food, called bracciale, which is really a dumpling or cake made of lamb meat and lard. Snail soup is another delicacy as well as cheese with bacon (la pizza). Like all southerners, the Neapolitan shows a marked fondness for sweets of all kinds and they would be quite lost without their portion of struffoli, a rather tough cake made principally of honey. Then nothing appeals to the Neapolitan appetite so insidiously as the famous Easter cake of Cassatella, which is sprinkled most temptingly with field pork fat, and in which whole eggs are baked, shell and all, a questionable dainty to educated palates.

The Neapolitan women are seldom beautiful and generally not even pretty. They are usually poorly built, with swarthy complexions and irregular features. Now and then one finds a lustrous pair of eyes of great beauty, but rarely the Neapolitan women are not to be compared with the women of the country as seen in Rome and in the Campagna, whose trim figures, graceful movements and frequently charmingly fascinating faces so often greet the eye of the traveler. Their fullness of form, proud bearing, and fine profiles are all conspicuously absent in the wives of the Neapolitan. And how could it well be otherwise? Are they not "beasts of burden" for "beasts of burden"? Are the cauchini, by reason of their occupation, much more than this?—House and Cos.

At the town meeting of Boxboro, Mass., March 18, four women were elected members of the school committee: Mrs. R. Y. Nelson, Mrs. C. T. Wetherbee, Mrs. C. H. Burroughs and Mrs. C. H. Brown.

HE BATTERED HIS OWN CLOTHES.

Mr. Bright Cook Succeeded in Getting the Better of Him.

A citizen of Kiev, Russia, found fault with the dinner prepared by his new cook and rashly embodied his criticism in cutting sarcasms. The young woman heard him in silence. In the evening he knocked up against a man in a deserted little street, and when he ventured to remonstrate he was vigorously assaulted. Unable to get the better of his adversary, he determined to do what he could at least to identify him later on, and with this object in view tore his assailant's fashionable clothes into shreds. On his return home, some few hours later, he found the cook standing at the door, ready to shake the dust of his house off her feet. The gentleman, whose wounds and bruises laid him in no very amiable mood, simply said: "Joy be with you! Some time will pass before you get another place. And as to character—well, trust me to give you one that will stick."

On the following morning he discovered that his best clothes in the wardrobe were in tatters and his glossy silk hat an unsightly wreck. Hastily summoning the other servants to the room, he angrily asked them what they knew about the matter, whereupon the nurse replied that the cook, in one of her freaks of fun, had danned her master's garments and gone out to walk in them the evening before, sticking on an artificial moustache to help to keep up the illusion. Then it dawned upon the wretched man that his assailant of the day before was the touchy, turbulent cook. Less than a fortnight later he received a letter through the city post informing him, in somewhat ungrammatical but unmistakable language, "You led about the place, respected sir, when you said I could not get another if I left yours. I've been in five different places since then, and I'll be going to the sixth next Monday. Trusting your language teaching, I remain, Frankovska."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A "DOCTOR" FOR BRUSH BOYS.

The Tailor Tells How the Coat Collar Is Quickly Ruined.

The most difficult thing to fit on a man is a coat collar, and it is the easiest thing to get out of shape, except perhaps the knees of the trousers. A tailor molds and shapes a collar with his hands and hot goos to conform with the measurements he has taken of the shape of an individual's shoulders, and if it does not take a great deal of all usage to destroy his work.

"The worst enemy a coat collar has," said the tailor, "is the colored boy who brushes your clothes in the barber shop, hotel or sleeping car. When he helps you on with your overcoat, he reaches under for your coatcollar, grasps the overcoat collar with the other hand and gives you underneath two or three smart jerks, which pull the collar down and away from the neck and bunches it on the shoulders, and the overcoat finishes the work of destroying its shape. This should never be allowed under any consideration."

"The proper way to keep the coat collar in place is to slung your shoulders forward after you have put the coat on. The collar will then fall into place on your neck; the cloth will adjust itself to the shape of your shoulders and stay there. Don't pull the collar about, and don't, above all, allow the brush boy to pull your coat out of shape under the pretense of getting your overcoat on your shoulders."

Brush boys will please note.—Kansas City Star.

Metacarpalgia.

Metacarpalgia, or fourth toe disease, has been the subject of much scientific discussion. Many patients have been operated on, the operation consisting of the removal of a portion of the bone of the toe, which had become highly inflamed. A new form of treatment is that of shaping the shoe that the weight will not come directly upon the ball of the foot, but slightly back of the ball, and this is secured by making the ankle and instep close fitting and the toe and ball very broad and easy. One physician advises that a depression be made in the sole of the shoe just beneath the fourth toe, so that there shall be no pressure from any direction. This works well in some cases, but in others the surgical remedy is the only successful one.—New York Ledger.

Idol Worship.

I have never had the opportunity of examining the idol worshiping kind of amusements, but it seems possible that the immutability of aspect of his little wooden god may sometimes furnish him with an unaccounted awe, even when and indeed especially after he had thrashed it.—"Rhoda Fleming," George Mason.

The box plait has "arrived," says a New York correspondent. It seems likely to stay here. Wherever and however it goes it is successful. It dominates dress skirts and beautiful bodies. It is the keynote to the present style in costume. One reason for this is that in every form it is becoming to nearly everybody. The full box plaited skirt is especially graceful, with its plaiting of the fashionable bodice hides many an otherwise obvious defect. Of course to the beautiful all things are beautiful, but even here the box plait is noticeable as a particularly fetching effect.

DRESSING LIKE WOMEN.

A Time When Feminine Styles Were Preferred by Men.

In point of fact, the early medieval man and woman looked much alike as the fin de siècle wheedman and his bicycle girl. Take the king and queen in a pack of cards. They are early medieval. Notice the surprising similarity in their costumes—the same wide robes and angular folds, the same stained glass stiffness. Notices at cards may be accused for being at a loss sometimes, as to what they have learned to look for the king's beard.

With the wane of the age of chivalry came a singular exaggeration in the toilet of men. They deliberately imitated the women. They allowed their hair to grow long, cultivated curls by the hot irons and ornaments and not only wore chaplains, like diadems, to curb their flowing locks. In the texture and color of their garments they showed the same effeminacy, for they began to affect brilliant reds and blues and to wear costly trimmings and jewelry.

This, too, was the age of the singing, wallowing lover, fainting at his mistress's frown. Every knight who could write or sing posed as a minstrel and rehearsed his love affairs. At every gathering of the nobility there was a childish prattle of love, cloying and monotonous for very sweetness. The sexes seemed to have changed places. It was the lover who was a shy wallflower, who blushed and went about weeping and wept from his secret passion. As we look over the poems of the troubadours, those bands of love, the lady seems always unapproachable, listening with contemptuous calm to the gentleman's gentle advances. While he succumbs to nervous exhaustion she goes about her business perfectly healthy, either indifferent or coolly conscious of her power.—W. D. McGuckness in Lippincott.

Women Who Find Opium.

New York is so vast and wealthy a community that it is not surprising to find the demand for talent of all sorts. The city itself does not appear to produce enough for its own wants and so draws from the outside world. There is a constant stream of bright, intelligent women flowing into the metropolis, and yet there is always room for more. It is hard to keep a record of all who come, as most of them respond to engagements of which the public knows nothing.

Of the many newcomers Miss Esther Singleton makes a specialty of literary and musical essays and novel entertainments, in which poetry, song and the piano are components. She has a delightful way of illustrating history, drama and verse with musical compositions. Miss Louise Stockton is especially a great literary reader and master. She makes books living beings and makes even the dullest realize the organic relation between literature and daily life. Miss Boston is an apostle of contemporaneous literature. She strives to induce women to read carefully American history, to understand what is going on around them and to master the great authorities in order to comprehend recurrent facts and questions.

Miss Martin Johnson is a music performer. She is a student of her art and science. She can at a place determine the strength and weakness of any student or amateur.

Miss Mary Proctor makes astronomy and mathematics simple and wonderfully fascinating. Miss Jessie H. Bancroft is the leader of popular culture, or muscular Christianity. In this field she finds the secret of health, beauty, grace, endurance and the power to work merrily with either mind or body.

Miss Fuld and Miss Yates are both the original scholars. Miss Singleton is an authority on South American topics. These and many others are a power in the parlor as well as on the platform. They are leading their sisters upward into a higher and broader culture.—Margherita Arline Hansen in New York Mail and Express.

"DEVIL ANSE" PREVIEWED.

A Barbours at Which a Noted Traveler Leader Mastered the Occurrences.

The other day the people of Logan county, W. Va., held a grand barbecue to celebrate the division of the county. Tables were spread in the street, and all traffic was suspended. Hundreds of stalwart mountaineers came to wit their wives and children from the region roundabout. Eight big black bears had been shot within a mile or two of the town, and their carcasses, served in barbarous style, were the place de reserch of the feast. The housewifery that ad and surrounded with roasted and baked "possums, wild turkeys, pheasants, quail, rabbits and all sorts of domestic fowl. Poultry by the barrel were roasted, and pumpkin pies by the hundred lined the tables. Hard cider was the beverage.

David Anse Hatfield, the noted leader of the Hatfield-McCoy vendetta, was master of ceremonies. He stood at the head of the table with a half open vest, from which the buttons of three his revolver protruded. Though there is a general privy eat upon Devil Anse's head, it is said there was not a disturbing word spoken and that the barbecue was a great success. The popular satisfaction with the president officer largely grew out of the fact that there are over a score of graves on the adjacent hillside testifying to his deadly skill with those pistols.—New York Tribune.

Profitable Reading.

The supreme court of Illinois has decided that the eight hour law, or, as it is generally known, the sweat along law, is unconstitutional. The law prohibited the employment of women for more than eight hours a day or more than 48 hours a week in any factory in Illinois. Probably 40,000 women in Illinois who work in factories are affected by the decision, 32,000 of whom live in Chicago. They are employed in the main in shoe factories, cloak and clothing houses, candy factories, paper box shops and various other manufacturing establishments. The law was passed in 1893, and has since been enforced. This will probably end the valuable work that the women factory inspectors have been carrying on, with Mrs. Florence Kelley as their chief.—Springfield Letter.
